

In Search of a Title

By Elysia McMullen and Evangelos Biskas

'In search of a Title' presents an everyday world where magic and the inexplicable is part of the routine. Evangelos Biskas V, Elysia McMullen, Isaac Poels and Ruben den Brok work with sound, motion and improvisational techniques, inspired by the surrealists. They rely on their impulses and instincts to experience freedom in their performance, leading to humour, absurdity and originality.

The vision of Elysia McMullen and Evangelos Biskas is to let imagination and creativity become part of daily life; to influence the way in which we perceive reality, by opening a multidimensional world, in which nothing is one-sided nor fixed according to laws of logic and rationality. Ultimately, the performances by Elysia and Evangelos invite the audience into a trip, in order to open up new doors of perception.

Wendy Lubberding in Theaterkrant (*):

"Then we have already dived deep into a dream. Such a world in which people around you suddenly appear differently, without it being astounding. (...) Satisfied you find how carefully you move. Everything is beautiful."

Target Audience

The performance is open for everyone and we make it for everyone. We believe it could be especially interesting for audience that is searching for multidisciplinary performances and experimental approaches to performance. We can imagine it could attract artists from different disciplines such as visual arts, theatre, dance and music as a performance where they could experience their discipline in another way. Also, the performance may be particularly interesting for people who are intrigued by surrealism.
